New River Gorge Marks Second Anniversary as a National Park

FAYETTEVILLE, W. Va., December 12, 2022 - Southern West Virginia's New River Gorge National Park and Preserve will mark its second anniversary as a national park on Dec. 22, 2022. Known for its abundant outdoor recreational opportunities, compelling history and stunning beauty, this cherished Appalachian playground continues to climb in popularity as more and more people discover this easily accessible and affordable vacation destination.

The designation has been a boon to tourism in the entire Southern West Virginia region.

Although the New River Gorge is within a day's drive of more than half of the U.S. population, it's not at all uncommon to see visitors from as far away as Oregon and California. The park is welcoming increasing numbers of international travelers as well, according to Roger Wilson, CEO of Adventures on the Gorge, an adventure resort adjacent to the park boundaries.

"As the country's newest national park, it is understandable that so many people want to see what all the fun is about," said Wilson. "This is a multi-day destination, and we're finding that many visitors split their time among park activities, participating in outdoor adventures like rafting and mountain biking and roaming the small towns and historic sites along the country roads for which West Virginia is so famous."

So far this year, nearly 1.6 million visitors have explored the park. While that number represents a small drop compared to year-to-date visitors in 2021, it's still significantly more than the pre-Covid year of 2019, when a total of 1,195,721 visitors were recorded for the entire year.

How the national park designation happened

Wilson was among the outdoor recreation business leaders who worked in partnership with legislators to develop the omnibus bill that included the national park designation. The initiative specifically protects hunting, fishing and trapping as well as supporting the dynamic recreation industry and its thousands of jobs. The move was lauded as a bipartisan, public-private initiative that benefits local residents, visitors and workers.

About the New River Gorge National Park and Preserve

The New River Gorge first became a National Park Service (NPS) site in 1978 as the New River Gorge National River. For centuries, much of the rugged river was not easily accessible to humans. That changed in 1873 when railroads opened up the isolated area and made it possible to transport coal to the outside world. Mining boom towns such as Thurmond emerged seemingly overnight.

The park encompasses more than 70,000 acres of land along 53 miles of the New River from Bluestone Dam to Hawk's Nest Lake. The rugged whitewater river flows northward through deep and spectacular canyons, and it is the deepest and longest river gorge in the Appalachian Mountains.

The region is also home to the Gauley River National Recreation Area and Bluestone National Scenic River, giving Southern West Virginia a trifecta of NPS destinations.

The park is within 500 miles of about 60 percent of the U.S. population. Two major interstates - I-77 and I-64 - cross through the heart of the region. The area is served by two regional airports - Raleigh County

Memorial Airport in Beckley and Greenbrier Valley Airport in Lewisburg as well as Amtrak train stations and Yeager Airport in Charleston.

Four NPS Visitor Centers feature exhibits that showcase the history, culture and natural offerings of the New River Gorge National Park and Preserve as well as the Gauley River National Recreation Area and the Bluestone National Scenic River.

What to do in the New River Gorge National Park and Preserve

Among the many human-powered slow travel experiences available in the region are guided whitewater rafting on both the New and Gauley Rivers as well as rock climbing, hiking, mountain biking, fishing, ziplining and stand up paddle boarding.
